Review

"Todd Green has written a compelling and important book. The future of the West rises and falls on its ability to welcome the contributions of its most diverse elements. Thus, Islamophobia doesn't just hurt Muslims, it weakens Western civilization. Professor Green's book helps us understand the problem and generate creative solutions."—Eboo Patel, Interfaith Youth Core

"Tragically, the ongoing conflicts in many areas of the world seem likely to continue to generate more reports of violence and to reinforce negative attitudes toward Muslims and Islam. Amid this challenge, Green offers a helpful, wide-ranging analysis of major developments together with thoughtful proposals for transforming attitudes and behaviors."—Leo Lefebure, Georgetown University

"This is an extremely important new book. Muslims and Christians together make up well over half of the world's population. Without peace and justice between these two religious communities, there can be no meaningful peace in the world. Our future depends on finding a different way of relating. To this end, the author summarizes encyclopedic information, interprets it clearly, and provides insights that point to a new direction."&#151Richard Olson, Review & Expositor

"Exceptionally well written, organized and presented, 'The Fear of Islam: An Introduction to Islamopliobia in the West' is as informed and informative as it is thoughtful and thought-provoking." --John Burroughs, The Midwest Book Review

"This is an outstanding presentation of the history and current state of Islamophobia. Todd Green draws upon reliable studies supplemented by original research to demonstrate how perceptions of Muslims are shaped and distorted, leading to prejudice and fear. Highly recommended for reporters, teachers, and policy makers." Ingrid Mattson, Huron University College at the University of Western Ontario --Ingrid Mattson, Huron University College at the University of Western Ontario

"Islamophobia is a new name but a very old type of racism. Todd Green traces its roots and its rational and ideological objectives. This is a critical and timely contribution, as it shows the complex historical route used in the West to construct the Other, 'the Muslim,' a production of fear that ends up being a great danger for the West itself. Combating Islamophobia starts with analyzing and understanding its origin: this is what the reader will find in this great book, very well documented." --Tariq Ramadan, University of Oxford, St. Anthony's College

THE FEAR OF ISLAM: AN INTRODUCTION TO ISLAMOPHOBIA IN THE WEST BY TODD H. GREEN PDF

American and European societies, particularly in the long wake of the events of 9/11 and the bombings in Madrid and London, have struggled with the recurrent problem of Islamophobia, which continues to surface in waves of controversial legislative proposals, public anger over the construction of religious edifices, and outbreaks of violence. The ongoing conflict between Israel and Palestine contributes fuel to the aggressive debate in Western societies and creates the need for measured discussion about religion, fear, prejudice, otherness, and residual colonialist attitudes. The Fear of Islam speaks into this context, offering an introduction to the historical roots and contemporary forms of religious anxiety regarding Islam within the Western world. Tracing the medieval legacy of religious polemics and violence, Green weaves together a narrative that orients the reader to the complex history and issues that originate from this legacy, continuing through to the early and late modern colonial enterprises, the theories of "Orientalism," and the production of religious discourses of alterity and the clash of civilizations that proliferated in the era of 9/11 and the war on terror. The book contains analysis of interviews from figures such as Keith Ellison, John Esposito, Ingrid Mattson, Eboo Patel, Tariq Ramadan, and others.

An important book written to overcome one of the most socially acceptable forms of bigotry in the modern era
By Clint Schnekloth
You know there really isn't anything about this book to not like. It's very straightforward and programmatic, but that's needed. It walks the reader through the history of the development of Islamophobia in Western culture, including in-depth analysis of some of the most significant cultural moments of the last century.

Definitions are clear. The book acknowledges consistently that it is explaining Islamophobia to a Western audience. It does not try to speak "for" Muslims, as if one could do that in any sense. It concludes with a set of interviews with major voices for understanding Islam better. This final Q&A, how to overcome Islamophobia, is robust, and a wonderful agenda to follow.

I can hardly believe how helpful this book is. It needs to be read in every religion department of every university.

This book is a must read for anyone wishing to understand one of the most important points of social tension in the world today.
By Scott E. Hendrix
Green is not only an excellent scholar, but he is also a gifted communicator. This book traces the origins of Islamophobic ideas from the middle ages and the period of the Reformation down to the current day, with a special focus on the rhetoric surrounding 9/11 and the period afterwards. It is written for the average educated reader, so Green avoids jargon and does a wonderful job of explaining complex ideas--such as the importance of post-colonial theory for understanding Islamophobic thinking--in a way that is not only clear and understandable but is also utterly compelling and interesting.

Four Stars
By M. Brislen
It is a good introduction. I would have liked to have seen more detail on the Islamophobic industry.
